CHICAGO -- It's not surprising that Chicago Bears fans are lashing out over the knee injury that prevented quarterback Jay Cutler from returning to Sunday's NFC Championship Game. As would be expected, fans are angry and frustrated and found an easy target. It happens.

What has been stunning to me, however, is the volume of NFL players who joined the chorus. This might not have happened even two years ago, michigan state football jersey, nfl stitched jerseys, but the advent of Twitter has given players a voice at a time when they used to be out of the public eye and, football jersey creator, like us, new nfl jersey, are caught up in the emotion of watching a game on television.

[+] Enlarge Jonathan Daniel/Getty Images Jay Cutler spent the majority of the second half Sunday on the sideline. As we noted Sunday, official nfl jersey, Jacksonville Jaguars running back Maurice Jones-Drew said he thought Cutler should have finished the game. Colleague Mike Sando put together an item just of NFC West players who ripped him, from Arizona Cardinals defensive tackle Darnell Dockett to Seattle Seahawks linebacker Aaron Curry to Seahawks defensive end Raheem Brock -- who called him a "sissy."

Philadelphia Eagles cornerback Asante Samuel wrote Bears players should look at Cutler "sideways." Jaguars linebacker Kirk Morrison wrote: "If my knee was hurt or acl/mcl/pcl sprain, new nfl uniforms nike, womens packers jersey, I would not be standing up on the sideline."

The criticism aimed at Cutler wasn't limited to current players. Former Tampa Bay linebacker Derrick Brooks tweeted:

BEARS fans I am so SORRY, nike combat nfl, I have to be crawling and cant get up to come off field, air force hockey jersey, nike jerseys, nike uniforms nfl, Josh Freeman would not come out, MEDS ARE AVAILABLE

Brooks followed-up that tweet with the following:

HEY there is no medicine for a guy with no guts and heart

Future Hall of Famer Deion Sanders echoed Brooks' remarks.

Folks i never question a players injury but i do question a players heart. Truth

It should be noted that no NFC North players have jumped into the fray; they have played Cutler more often than any other group. And Bears players were ruthless in defending him. We noted the angry responses from center Olin Kreutz and linebacker Brian Urlacher on Sunday. Via Twitter, nfl stitched jerseys, safety Chris Harris wrote:

I will defend my QB all day. He was injured and he couldn't go. No one on our team questions his toughness POINT BLANK, cheap nfl jerseys free shipping! He's a tough SOB

To all of u assaulting Jay's toughness. Are we 11-5 and NFC North Div Champs without him? No I think not. Please think before tweeting!

Thanks to social media, new nfl nike jerseys, nike nfl gloves, this really is an unprecedented situation. To have a wide swath of players criticizing another in real time, without the benefit of first-hand knowledge of the situation, fitted cap, is both dangerous and fascinating. What did Jones-Drew or Dockett or Brock base their opinions on? I'm guessing it was the mentality that players share of playing through injuries when at all possible.

- Cutler PollCenter So what do we make of the conclusions so many of them drew? Did they observe some kind of sideline activity that suggested Cutler wasn't injured enough to leave the game? Did the circumstances of the game mandate a different set of injury standards? Would Cutler have been better off flopping to the turf and then being helped off the field?

If there were simply one or two players speaking out, maybe you could write them off as extremists. But the cross-section that we've already heard from suggests Cutler's departure struck a true nerve not just among fans but among his peers as well. Part of me wonders if it was more an indictment of Cutler's standing with his peers than it was a serious questioning of his toughness. If you don't like someone, nike nfl uniforms 2012, you're going to be much less likely to give him the benefit of the doubt.

As we discussed Sunday, I'm not sure it's fair to Cutler. But this thing has gotten too big for rational thought and cooler heads to prevail. Time will tell whether the sting fades or if Cutler's reputation will take a permanent hit.

RENTON, college football jersey, new nfl uniforms, Wash. -- Matt Hasselbeck was at his best for the Seattle Seahawks against New Orleans in the wild-card round Saturday.

The quarterback might have been better during his weekly media session Thursday.

Loose and reflective, womens football jerseys, Hasselbeck congratulated quarterbacks coach Jedd Fisch on landing a job at "Miami of Ohio" -- it was the University of Miami -- and deadpanned that he hugged coach Pete Carroll for saying the team wanted Hasselbeck to return next season.

The laid-back image Carroll projected when he answered a reporter's phone during a news conference Wednesday mirrors the tone he sets internally. That marks a change from former coach Mike Holmgren, who was more of a taskmaster behind the scenes.

"I can remember before some playoff games, myself feeling the need to break the ice, lighten the mood a little bit, custom nfl jersey," Hasselbeck said. "Now, football jersey cards, if anything, I'm feeling the desire to really get everybody to focus in a little bit more and just tighten screws a little bit."

Hasselbeck pointed to potential distractions surrounding a road playoff game in a major city. The team will arrive Friday, a day earlier than usual. Players will have free time.

"It's not a shopping trip, it's a business trip," Hasselbeck said.

The Seahawks have a good mix of personalities on their coaching staff, Hasselbeck said. He described offensive coordinator Jeremy Bates as having the demeanor of an old-school line coach, whereas Fisch is more relaxed. Carroll is ... Carroll.

"His style works with the group of coaches we have," Hasselbeck said.

On periodically crediting Bates and Fisch by name: "They give me a dollar every time I do that." On Carroll's comments about wanting him back: "I went and gave him a hug." Hasselbeck paused.
